

INTERIOR DESIGN®

MAY 31
2009

market tabloid
it's a jungle out there

Wilkhahn

Walter Papst, who passed away recently, debuted his three-legged 360 chair in 1955 to great acclaim. Now, this manufacturer has reissued the classic design. The chair, available in yellow, red, a natural beech finish, black, and gray, comes in an adult model, called 360/1 with a seat height of 17½ inches, and the child's 360/3, with a 14½-inch seat height. 212-229-9455; wilkhahn.com. circle 365

Terhi Tuominen

Origami is the obvious influence for the Fold chair. The multidimensional angles of the dining chair resemble the Japanese art's delicate paper folds. Stackable, it'll surely appeal to space-sensitive dwellers. 35-8-40-724-7720; terhituominen.com. circle 370

Mickus Projects

Ancient Aztec facades rather than corporate boardrooms come to mind with the wool-felt Relief chair by Ben Mickus. Using a material normally associated with industrial design, Mickus instead sculpts it into an architectural form over a spindly steel frame. The chair is 36½ inches high, 32 wide, and 34 deep. 917-843-2285; mickusprojects.com. circle 366

KFF Design

Simple yet straightforward, the FM series of seating is a welcome antidote to highly conceptualized designs. The foam upholstered seat and back come in any of the manufacturer's fabric, leather, or COM. It comes in a lounge version with ottoman or side chair. 305-531-0704; kff.de. circle 369

Urban Archaeology

A tribute to Pierre Chareau is found in the Chareau seat. The L-shape mahogany stool is based on one of the French architect's original gutsy designs. It can be specified in any metal finish and measures 19¾ inches high, 19½ wide, and 16¾ deep. 212-813-6888; urbanarchaeology.com. circle 367

Desu Design

Simplicity marries warmth in the Mantis bar stool. Its stable tripod design combines walnut and anodized aluminum with a comfortable chrome footrest. The 12-inch-diameter seat adjusts from 27 to 33 inches in height. 718-384-7306; desudesign.com. circle 368

